

App Idea Description
App name: Expensio (working name) Expensio is a mobile app designed to make shared expenses easier to track and settle. Today, when friends travel, roommates share rent, or people go out to eat, it's often awkward to ask for money. Reminders feel intrusive, and people hesitate to ask for money. Expensio is built around a different approach: instead of constantly showing "you owe X to Y", the app focuses on making it easy to add expenses, track them, and settle them. The goal is simple: No one feels like the "money police". No awkward conversations. No forgotten expenses. Clear closure when a cycle ends. You add expenses normally (like "Pizza 100 with Ri"). This isn't meant to replace every finance app. It's meant for people who hate awkward money sits.
Timestamp	Email Address	Your age group ?	Who do you usually share expenses with ?	How do you currently split or track shared expense? Do shared expenses in your group usually get settled?	Have you ever felt awkward asking someone to settle in group expenses, does one person usually end up paying for everyone?	Does this idea sound useful to you ?	Would you try an app like this with your group ?	Would you choose this over your current method (if this app existed today, what is the one feature you would want to see in it)?
